

NEWS

Dear all,

We hope you are doing great.

Spring has passed in no time, and it's around this time of year when I'm worried about the rainy season in Japan.

At this time when the weather changes a lot, whether it's sunny or rainy, it's also important to manage your physical condition.

The number of people infected with COVID-19 in Japan has decreased, and the emergency declaration has been lifted.

However, it seems that it will be a while before the city comes back to life.

It seems difficult to spend the same time as before the COVID-19 epidemic, and even when walking outside, you have to be concerned with social distance and hygiene.

Also, in the summer, Japan is particularly humid, so wearing a mask makes it hard to breathe, so if you are not careful, there is a great risk of heat stroke.

But, you still have to be careful and stay healthy.

"WAGASHI" (Japanese Confectionery)

Do you know Japanese Confectionery "Wagashi"?

Wagashi (Japanese traditional confectionery) is a whole category of confectionery made using traditional production techniques in Japan.

Japanese sweets are typically made of rice, wheat, red bean paste, and sugar etc. Most of them do not use butter or oil, and they are healthy.

Actually, June 16th is the Day for Japanese Confectionery.

It called "Wagashi no hi".

Wagashi no hi (the Day of Japanese Confectionery) was a memorial day, established by Japan Wagashi Association in 1979.

In the middle of the Heian period (794 ~ 1192), the epidemics spread, so Emperor changed the era name.

On June 16th of the first year (848), which was revised, a "Kasyo ceremony" was held, in which 16 confectioneries and rice cakes were offered to Shinzen (before god) in hopes of preventing evil and promoting health.

The Japan Wagashi Association established the Memorial Day relating to this historical fact in order to make greater efforts to pass on Japanese food culture properly and actively to the next generations.

Why don't you try "Wagashi" when you come to Japan? ☺

MOBILE APP FOR CONIC TOOLS

Compatible with iPhone and Android

Conic tools can be ordered from a dedicated mobile app!

Up to now, part of the work that is a person in charge of material supply has done from request for quotation to ordering can be requested directly from the site (factory worker) for the quotation of the tool.

It has a sophisticated UI (*1) with simplified functions so that anyone can use it immediately.

*UI=User Interface

But I'm worried that people on site can directly make requests for quotes and orders ...

Leave it to this app!

In this application, the approver is registered in advance in the system, and when ordering, this registration approver is approved by E-MAIL.

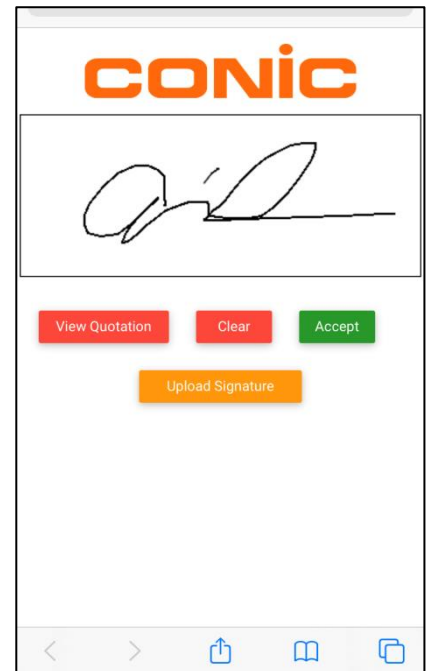

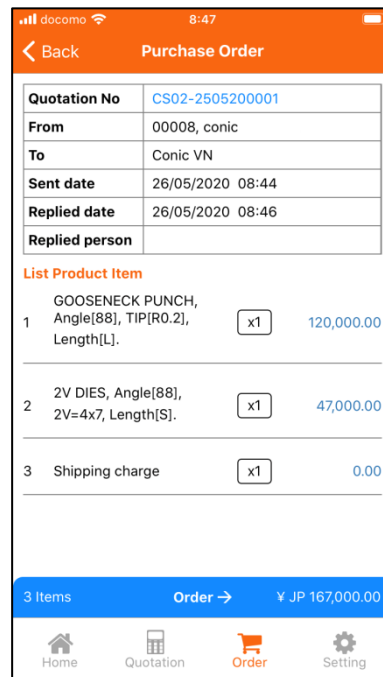

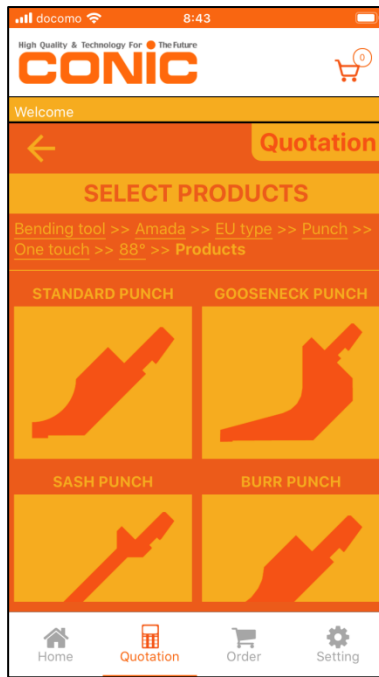

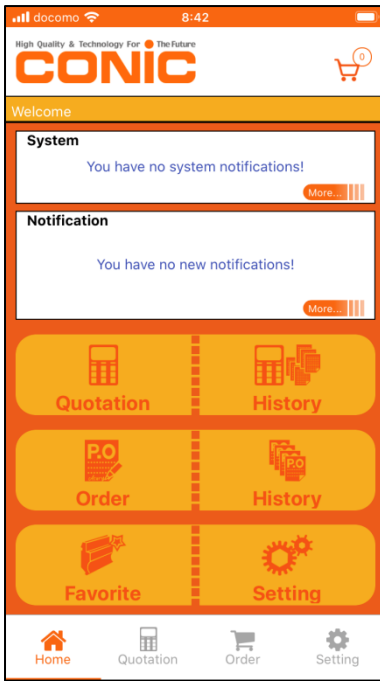

The approver confirms the order details and the approval is completed simply by writing his / her own signature from either the web browser or the mobile app.

All the quotes and order cases created in the past can be managed using the mobile app without using paper.

In addition, since a separate comment form with the agency or Conic is attached for each case, there is no need to manage the communication by phone or E-mail as in the past.

Next time, we will explain the system for dealer. Look forward to it!!!
